

IAM 4 REPUBLIC MECHANICS

DEADLINE FOR REPUBLIC MANAGEMENT TO RESPOND TO IAM OBJECTIONS TO INFLATED VOTER ELIGIBILITY LIST IS TODAY

As reported previously, today is the deadline for Republic Airways management to respond to the IAM's previously submitted objections to the voter eligibility list.

On September 1, 2020, Republic management, in consultation with its notoriously anti-worker and high-priced law firm Ford and Harrison, submitted an inflated voter eligibility, which included every supervisor employed by Republic and many clerical workers. This was done to inflate the list of eligible voters in hopes Republic AMT cards would fall below the 50 percent threshold to conduct a representation election and to greatly slow the process down. Both of these actions are an attack on our right to vote and meant to break our efforts to form a union.

By the close of business today, the NMB will have Republic's response and will then have to review the response. The agency will then issue its determination regarding eligible voters.

It is important to note that there is NO DEADLINE for the NMB to complete its determination. The IAM will press for a timely determination, so a representation vote can be scheduled as soon as possible.

We must remain resolute in our unity and see this campaign through to a successful conclusion. It is clear that Republic will do all that it can for us to remain without a union and without power.

The IAM will provide us an update regarding the upcoming NMB voter eligibility determination when it becomes available.

Unity. Power. Fairness
